

Nature Report Presentation

By Kenneth Yu

Have you heard of the bird, Cassowary? Well, you can learn about in my Cassowary essay. I am making this presentation because of the research I have done about cassowaries:)

- First of all, I want to help make Cassowaries be able to live on.
- Second of all, I want to let people know that cassowaries are actually nice.

Habitats include...

- Parts of Australia
- New Guinea
- Cape York

Number of cassowaries in wild currently, 4,000

Status, Vulnerable or endangered

1970

Has suffered a rapid decline since 1970

Fortunately, population is increasing

2010

Approximately 2,500 in the wild in 2010

Cassowaries mostly feed on fallen fruit, but will eat small vertebrates, invertebrates, fungi, carrion and plants.
